The BBSHD is a very strong and efficient motor, and gives you the flexibility of power ranging from 250w all the way up to a potential 1700w. I wouldn't personally install a BBSHD on a recumbent bike for myself, as I think having all that power available would be too tempting to use and I like to get a decent workout when I go riding.

Another type of exercise bike resistance comes from pedaling against the airflow of a fan blade located on the front of the bike. The Schwinn AirDyne, a popular bike model that has been in use for decades, is a good example of this design. It uses an open fan instead of a flywheel and creates stronger resistance as pedaling speed increases.
